To Whom It May Concern

Dear Sir/Madam,

RE: MEDICAL REPORT FOR HANS ANDERSON

The above mentioned was diagnosed with Klippel Trenaunay Weber syndrome and has an abnormal large superficial vein in the Right lower limb, specifically the right thigh.

The vein starts near the knee joint and courses up the thigh. In the mid thigh region, it connects via a small channel to the Greater Saphenous Vein (GSV). It then runs parallel and medial to the GSV, up to the groin. The abnormal vein does not show any connection to the superficial epigastric, pudendal, or Right Common femoral veins.

The abnormal vein continues in the right groin, and then to the hypogastrium, crossing over to the left side and making a sharp turn posteriorly to empty into the Left Common femoral vein.

The Abnormal vein requires surgery, which will entail ligation of the vein at its origin, and at its terminus on the left as it drains into the left common femoral vein, plus ligation of the small channel to the GSV. This should deal with the abnormal vein.

Any assistance rendered to him in regard to his health is highly appreciated.

Thank you.

Yours Sincerely,

Dr. John Paul Magala (MBChB, MMed Surgery (Mak), Fellowship in Cardiovascular Surgery (Citizens Specialty Hospital, India))
